SHARED READING (for World Civ II): all students must read 1984 by George Orwell. Science fiction. 1948. Winston Smith, a worker at the Ministry of Truth in the future political entity of Oceania, puts his life on the line when he joins a covert brotherhood in rebelling against the Party that controls all human thought and action.

---

In addition to 1984, each student must read TWO books from the list below:

The Handmaid's Tale by Margaret Atwood. Science fiction/dystopian. 1985. In what was once the United States, now called the Republic of Gilead, the ruling class reacts to social unrest and a declining birth rate with extremely repressive policies.

Jane Eyre by Charlotte Bronte. Classic. 1847. Jane, a plain and penniless orphan in nineteenth-century England, accepts employment as a governess and soon finds herself in love with her melancholy employer, a man with a terrible secret. (Note: those who read Jane Eyre could consider reading its modern heir, Wide Sargasso Sea by Jean Rhys afterwards; see below.)

Wuthering Heights by Emily Bronte. Classic. 1848. The passionate love story of stubborn Cathy and wild-as-the-wind Heathcliff in the rugged land of the Yorkshire moors has been a favorite since its publication.

Possession by A.S. Byatt. Historical fiction/Mystery. 1990. Booker Prize winner. The tale of two young scholars researching the lives of two Victorian poets; a novel of wit and romance, at once an intellectual mystery and a triumphant love story.

Jack Maggs by Peter Carey. Mystery. 1997. A boy who was deported to Australia for thieving, returns to London in 1837 as a grown man and becomes acquainted with an author who is fascinated by mesmerism and the criminal mind.

Jonathan Strange & Mr. Norrell by Susanna Clarke. Fantasy. 2010. In 1806, most people believe magic to be dead in England—until the reclusive Mr. Norrell reveals his powers, and another magician emerges: the young, daring Jonathan Strange.

Robinson Crusoe by Daniel Defoe. Adventure/Classic. 1719. An Englishman becomes the sole survivor of a shipwreck and lives for nearly thirty years on a deserted island.

A Tale of Two Cities by Charles Dickens. Classic. 1859. "It was the best of times; it was the worst of times." Thus begins the tale of Sydney Carton, a disreputable lawyer, and his involvement in the French Revolution.

Little Brother by Cory Doctorow. Science fiction. 2008. In San Francisco, having been interrogated for days by officials of a police state that has emerged after a terrorist attack, seventeen-year-old Marcus decides to use his expertise in computer hacking to set things right.

Paddy Clarke, Ha Ha Ha by Roddy Doyle. Historical fiction. 1995. Booker Prize winner. This witty and poignant novel charts the triumphs, indignities, and bewilderment of ten-year-old Paddy as he tries to make sense of things in 1968 in Ireland.

Rebecca by Daphne Du Maurier. Classic/suspense. 1938. The second Mrs. de Winter narrates the haunting events surrounding her marriage to Maxim de Winter and her growing obsession with his mysterious first wife, the beautiful, now dead Rebecca.
Good to a Fault by Marina Endicott. Realistic fiction. 2011. Clara Purdy finds her predictable, middle-aged life shaken up when she tries to do the right thing by taking in a family after crashing their car and learning that the mother has late-stage cancer.

The Eyre Affair by Jasper Fforde. Fantasy; humor. 2001. Thursday Next works in Literary Detection in a surreal version of Great Britain, circa 1985, where time travel and cloning are commonplace.

A Room With A View by E.M. Forster. Classic. 1908. A charming young English woman is at war with the snobbery of her own class and with her conflicting desires when she finds herself attracted to someone deemed unsuitable for her.

My Brilliant Career by Miles Franklin. Historical fiction. 1980. A semi-autobiographical novel of a hot-tempered girl growing up in Australia around 1900, who aspires to become a person of note despite the prejudices against women at that time.

Good Omens by Neil Gaiman and Terry Pratchett. Fantasy; humor. 1996. The world will come to an end on next Saturday. Except: a fast-living demon and a fussy angel have grown fond of Earth's mortals and decide to try to stop the Apocalypse.

Cold Comfort Farm by Stella Gibbons. Classic; humor. 1932. Flora Poste finds herself in a gloomy, overwrought world and proceeds to organize everyone out of their romantic tragedies and into the pleasures of modern life in the 1930s.

Our Man in Havana by Graham Greene. Adventure. 1958. A vacuum cleaner salesman who is short of money accepts an assignment as an M16 agent in Havana, where soon his faked intelligence reports start coming true.

The Remains of the Day by Kazuo Ishiguro. Classic. 1990. Stevens, a butler at the end of three decades of service at Darlington Hall, recalls his career and tries to assure himself that he has served humanity by serving the "great gentleman," Lord Darlington.

A Certain Justice by P.D. James. Mystery. 1997. A lawyer is murdered soon after successfully defending her client who was on trial for murder. An investigator learns the client recently became engaged to the lawyer's daughter. Is there a connection?

Small Island by Andrea Levy. Realistic fiction. 2005. Hortense Joseph arrives in London from Jamaica in 1948 hoping to start a new life with her husband, but they find themselves struggling to fit into the strange culture of their foreign “motherland.”

Master of Thin Air: Life and Death on the World's Highest Peaks by Andrew Lock. Nonfiction; memoir. 2014. Opens with a fall down an almost vertical rock ramp, and recounts Lock’s sixteen-year journey to summit all of the world’s eight-thousanders.

Station Eleven by Emily St. John Mandel. Science fiction. 2014. In a pandemic-ravaged society, actress Kirsten Raymonde travels with a troupe performing Shakespeare and finds herself in a community in which a prophet will not let anyone leave alive.

Angela’s Ashes by Frank McCourt. Nonfiction; memoir. 1996. The luminous memoir of Frank McCourt, born in Depression-era Brooklyn to recent Irish immigrants and raised in the slums of Limerick, Ireland.

Enduring Love by Ian McEwan. Realistic fiction. 1997. After a chance meeting, Jed Perry begins to stalk author Joe Rose. Driven by religious zeal and misdirected love, the strange young man will slowly unravel each strand of Joe’s life.

Akata Witch by Nnedi Okorafor. Fantasy. 2017. Twelve-year-old Sunny Nwazue, an American-born child of Nigerian parents, moves with her family back to Nigeria, where she discovers her latent magical powers and uses them to catch a serial killer.

Updated May 6, 2019
The Cat’s Table by Michael Ondaatje. Historical fiction. 2011. Michael, now an adult, recalls the three-week long sea voyage he took as a boy in the early 1950s. During the trip across the Indian Ocean the boy meets a variety of characters on board.

White is for Witching by Helen Oyeyemi. Mystery. 2014. Sixteen-year-old Miranda struggles against the menacing haunted house she inhabits and a rare eating disease that causes her to eat non-edible substances.

Cry, the Beloved Country by Alan Paton. Classic. 1948. A Zulu pastor and his son’s struggles under white rule in South Africa.

Nation by Terry Pratchett. Fantasy; alternate history. 2008. After a devastating tsunami destroys all that they have ever known, Mau, an island boy, and Daphne, an aristocratic English girl, set about rebuilding their community.

Wide Sargasso Sea by Jean Rhys. Adventure; classic. 1966. Postcolonial novel centered upon Bertha, the Jamaican madwoman in the attic in Charlotte Bronte’s Jane Eyre, to which this novel could make an interesting follow-up read.

Sugar in the Blood: A Family’s Story of Slavery and Empire by Andrea Stuart. Nonfiction; history. 2013. Stuart uses her own family’s Caribbean story as the pivot for this epic tale of migration, colonialism, slavery, settlement, and survival.

Gulliver’s Travels by Jonathan Swift. Adventure; satire; classic. 1726. Recounts four remarkable journeys a ship’s surgeon, Lemuel Gulliver, including one stay in a land of six-inch-high people and another in a land of giants.

The Loved One by Evelyn Waugh. Historical fiction; satire. 1948. Evelyn Waugh’s biting satire about life in 1940s California and the American obsession with death and burial—and pets.

The Picture of Dorian Gray by Oscar Wilde. Classic. 1891. A handsome dissolute man who sells his soul for eternal youth is horrified to see the reflection of his degeneration in the distorted features of his portrait.

The Professor and the Madman: A Tale of Murder, Insanity, and the Making of the English Dictionary by Simon Winchester. Nonfiction; history. 2009. The Oxford English Dictionary took seventy years to complete, drawing from tens of thousands of brilliant minds. Hidden within the rituals of the OED’s creation is a fascinating and mysterious story.

Jeeves in the Morning by P.G. Wodehouse. Classic; humor. 1946. Bertie Wooster, dimwitted aristocrat with a heart of gold, is soon embroiled in a host of calamitous mishaps. Fortunately, Bertie's butler, Jeeves, is always nearby to perform a rescue.

Updated May 6, 2019